Sir or Madam:

Our picture copyrights are being infringed upon. [REDACTED] has been notified several times about this problem both via email and telephone messages from our company however she has never responded as of this date. We were finally able to speak with her on July 3rd, 2003 only by blocking our telephone number. On that date she agreed to remove all of our pictures from her web sites within 24 to 48 hours. While she did remove many of them, she or someone in her business actually had the audacity to replace one of our pictures with a new picture we added on July 2nd which she simply copied and cropped for her own use. (LifeTimeMothers.com indicates that they are now using their pictures which, they stated to us on the telephone, were not authorized.) Three of our pictures still remain on her web sites and this is unacceptable. A separate enclosed page indicates your search engine listings with the offending addresses.
