RE: Copyright Violations & Spamming Yahoo! Search Results

Dear Sir/Madam:

Thank you for making the last corrections for our copyright violations. Unfortunately, since that time, further copyright violations have occurred or continues to plague your search directory.

Due to Google's failure to resolve our copyright issues in the recent past, we're filing a suit against Google for copyright infringement.

The following websites have either taken text directly from our website and/or used our image of the capitol. One offender, in particular, has spammed your search results with numerous URLs for the same grants subject matter.

These websites do not have any authorization to use any of our intellectual properties. Under Yahoo!'s copyright regulations found at <http://docs.yahoo.com/info/copyright/copyright.html> we are filing our official complaint to you for immediate resolution of our problems.

GOVERNMENT OFFERS RELIEF TO SAGGING ECONOMY

Government Policy Changes Enacted to Stimulate Economic Recovery.

New Creation of "Bad Credit Loans" for Credit A, B, C, and D.

ACHIEVE THE AMERICAN DREAM

Millions in Mortgage Loans Earmarked For Credit Impaired

Are credit problems holding you back from buying that new home, car or starting a business? Here's great news!

Government and private lending institutions are coming to the rescue. They are relaxing credit requirements to make it easier for people with bad credit ratings to get low interest loans.

Billions are now available to purchase homes, cars, start a business, consolidate debts and many other purposes. It's part of a joint government and banking initiative to revitalize the economy by making loans more accessible to people previously rejected as bad credit risks. Never before has it been easier to get a guaranteed mortgage to purchase a new or used home. And since interest rates are at a 35 year low, now is the time to start canvassing the housing market for that dream home.

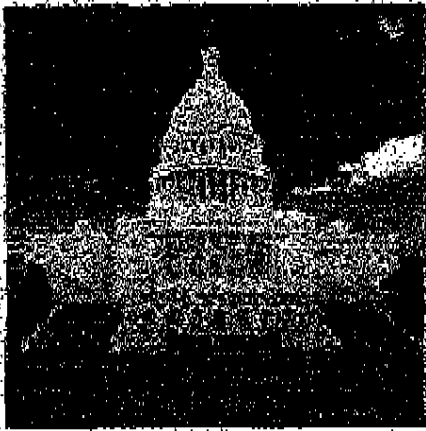

HUD secretary Mel Martinez and President Bush have also introduced a Homebuyers Bill of Rights to help prospective buyers understand the true costs of their mortgage and reduce settlement fees. Larger Financial Institutions have committed themselves to increasing home buying opportunities for minorities, credit impaired, the homeless, the elderly, people with disabilities and those on subsidized incomes.

Now is the time to act if you need money to buy a home, car, consolidate debts, etc. Low interest loans are now available, regardless of income or past credit history.

Obtain the latest information on these new programs as well as existing free grant and loan resources. It fills you in on all important new developments and provides direct applications for the loans program. It also provides a direct link to inside sources of government and financial institutions offering money for any worthwhile purpose.

Government Publications offers a CD-Rom which provides the latest information on these new programs as well as existing free grant and loan resources for any worthwhile purpose. The CD Rom also includes 50 successful grant and loan applications that were awarded money. These sample applications are "essential" items since most denied loan and grant applications are due to improper or incomplete paperwork.
