Attn: Google, Inc. Blogger, DMCA complaints

Dear Administrator:

I hereby hereby: (1) notify Google, Inc. of infringements of my copyright by your operating at directorblue.blogspot.com and (2) demand the expeditious removal of or prevention of access to directorblue.blogspot.com's infringing material, as identified below. In the event Google, Inc. does not comply with these demands, I reserves my right to take all appropriate action against Google, which may include, but is not limited to, claims of direct and contributory copyright infringement.

Whether or not your client directorblue.blogspot.com has a designated agent with United States Copyright Office and/or, if appropriate listed the proscribed contact information on its publicly accessible web site to receive notices of infringement as a means to limit its liability for such infringements, as provided for by the DMCA, 17 § U.S.C. 512(c), and despite of whether of not you are entitled to any such statutory limitations on its liability, I nonetheless hereby provide Google, Inc. the following DMCA proscribed Notification:

- (1) Your client directorblue.blogspot.com has infringed and continues to infringe copyrighted works, to which I own the exclusive right to reproduce, adapt, display and distribute.
- (2) Your client's infringing material is currently reproduced, adapted, displayed and distributed through its web site, and consists of, but is not limited to, my images and unauthorized derivatives of those images, all of which are literal or substantially similar copies of works which to reproduce, adapt, display, distribute. Your client's current infringements are located at the following Uniform Resource Locators (URLs):
